By Jonathan Portlock

3:40pm Monday 11th May 2009 in News

Despite cloudy skies and occasional showers, more than 2,000 people turned up to enjoy the Oxshott Village Day on Monday, May 4.

The family day out had lots on offer to entertain, including donkey rides, a bouncy castle, a clown spectacular on the main stage, as well as martial arts demonstrations.

There was also a chance for people to test their footballing skills against Chelsea players in a penalty shootout.

Goff Dubber and his jazz band entertained the crowds as they browsed the stalls set up by local businesses.
